

FLYING HIGH

Jared and Gail Brandt

Commercial Airline Pilot/Former Special Education Teacher • California

While considering retirement, Gail Brandt had thought of opening a health food store, because she was interested in health and nutrition. Then she was introduced to Neo-Life. “Now I do Neo-Life full time. I love being my own boss!” says Gail. “Jared, who’s a full-time pilot, sees Neo-Life as an exciting option for his future retirement.”

Success Secrets

“I get up early and go to work every morning, dressed as if I’m going out on appointments — even if I’m not! I’ve found that talking to people helps you to become a good listener, and good listeners can help fill people’s needs with Neo-Life!”

Packing for London!

“We’re excited about the World Leadership Convention in London! In fact, when we flew to the National Leadership Convention in Indian Wells, we were recognized as the first Builders to qualify for London! What an honor! Neo-Life rewards us at every level, which keeps us constantly reaching farther and higher. We’re shooting for the top ... the President’s Top 10 or the Founder’s Award! And by the time we reach that,” says Gail, “maybe I’ll have another little reward I’ve been wanting. There’s this T-Bird classic car I’ve been looking at, a ‘56 or ‘57 ...” —ccc—

For the Brandts, living in an airpark has its advantages! With 2 airplanes tucked in a private hangar adjacent to their home, Jared and Gail can bypass the airport — they simply taxi out to the runway and they’re off!

As an incentive for reaching certain levels, the Brandts offer their downline some unique rewards: lucky achievers can choose an exhilarating aerobic (or non-aerobic) biplane ride in the Christen Eagle, or they can go to lunch in the twin-engine Baron. Bon appétit!
